PUBLIC COMMENTS AND DISCUSSION: No comments.

Good morning. Aira Duyanen for the Culinary Union. My comments are about Station Casinos Chief Financial Officer Stephen Cootey. Mr. Cootey's job duties include "devot[ing] full time and attention to the business and affairs of the Company," according to his employer's 2017 filing with the SEC. A CFO of a publicly traded, Nevada gaming company should be credible when testifying under oath about significant matters. We know that in September 2022 the Commission discussed in a licensing hearing Mr. Cootey's ability to recall a significant event involving law enforcement.

In November 2019, Mr. Cootey was in the meeting with Station Casinos owners and others executives where senior management made a written presentation seeking approval for millions of dollars in spending to finance new health and retirement benefits. The presentation emphasized key points through underlined and red-bolded text to stress how funding the benefits would take away union power and disincentivize employees from supporting it. In December 2019, Mr. Cootey was a participant in a group text chat with Station Casinos owners where its Chief Legal Officer crowed that employees had removed union buttons after meetings announcing the benefits. So Mr. Cootey was in a meeting with underlined, bolded red content and in a group chat with updates about the roll out of plans partly discussed in that meeting.

Yet, according to the judge that presided over the unfair labor practice trial, Mr. Cootey and other executives testifying under oath "refused to admit that that there was any discussion at the meeting regarding the underlined and bolded red points in the health insurance and retirement proposals about incentivizing employees not to vote for a union and taking away union power." The judge found Mr. Cootey's account not to be credible. Station Casinos is appealing that finding, but you should ask yourselves why there should even be a doubt about Mr. Cootey's ability to provide transparent testimony in a government proceeding. As the Chief Financial Officer, Mr. Cootey is supposed to devote his full time and attention to the business and affairs of the Company. We believe a chief financial should be able to provide credible testimony under oath. Thanks.

Mi nombre es Benjamin Navarro. E trabajado por Sunset Station de kitchen worker por casi 26 años.

Recivi mi retiro la cantidad de $2586.72. Menos impuestos un total de solo alrededor de $2000 por haber trabajado 26 años.

E luchado muchos años para tener un retiro justo y digno, lo cual mi compania no a respetado nuestra decisión.

Durante nuestra lucha siento que e sido descriminado por mis actividades de union, e luchando 14 años para tener un contrato justo para mi y mis compañeros.

My name is Benjamin Navarro. I have worked for Sunset Station as a Kitchen Worker for almost 26 years.

I received my retirement, the amount of $2586.72. Minus taxes, a total of just around $2000.00 for having worked 26 years.

I have fought many years to have a fair and dignified retirement, which my company has not respected our decision.

During our fight I feel that I have been discriminated due to my union activities, I have been fighting 14 years to have a fair contract for myself and my coworkers.

COMMENTS OF ASSOCIATION OF GAMING EQUIPMENT MANUFACTURES ON PROPOSED REVISIONS TO NGC REGULATION 5.045

May 7, 2025

Good afternoon, Chair Hendrick, Members Assad and Sendall and Executive Secretary Rupert. I am Dan Reaser of Fennemore, appearing on behalf of AGEM, the Association of Gaming Equipment Manufacturers.

AGEM embraces the opportunity to participate in a reexamination of Regulation 5.045 which underwent a major revision just a little over five years ago. In pursuing this effort, AGEM recommends that the Board and Commission cast a wide net in soliciting input on the experience of all segments of the gaming industry in performing the Compliance Internal Reporting Systems ("CIRS"), and the effective oversight of the CIRS through the corporate governance structure selected by regulated companies.

As we embark on this effort, AGEM would make a handful of observation about topics for dialog:

- We should resist the inclination to create a single one size fits all approach to this regulatory compliance effort and be respectful of the business judgment by corporate boards of directors in selecting as fiduciaries the governance structure that best serves all the stakeholders of registrants and licensees.
- Likewise, we need to be open to the proposition that given the dynamic nature of the regulatory compliance environment, the rules should not inhibit innovation in how to organize this corporate function. The gaming industry enjoys neither exclusivity of thought leadership in this space nor a monopoly on creative implementation solutions.
- As it exists today, Subsection 5 of the Regulation has been carefully crafted to provide flexibility fostering different approaches to the CIRS oversight function. It allows for the compliance apparatus to be a committee of the board of directors, to be a department of an enterprise, to function as a wholly independent body and a variety of structures mixing and matching these approaches. The proposal appears to envision only a dedicated committee method and insists that only an independent member of the committee may qualify as the repository of Nevada regulatory knowledge. Today, those requirements can be satisfied in a variety of ways that will be eliminated in the proposal.

- We need to explore how the Board and Commission envision the proposed “extensive knowledge” test to be satisfied. As drafted, this standard is too subjective.
- There is good cause to also evaluate the “independence” test articulated in the proposed rule. As the proposal is drafted, it appears far more restrictive and in potential conflict with the standards applied by the stock exchange listing requirements, Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) regulations, proxy advisories and the incorporation laws of many jurisdictions. In this regard, care must be exercised to draft a rule that recognizes that many gaming companies are global firms. Regulation 5.045 should reflect the public policy balance envisioned by the Corporate Gaming Act of 1969, which is to promote the benefits of broadening the opportunity for investment in Nevada gaming through the pooling of capital and promoting a competitive industry.

AGEM reiterates the commitment to support a robust dialog on revisiting proposed revisions to Regulation 5.045. We welcome the opportunity to respond to any questions.
